FACULTY

At the Malvern Preparatory School, the main goal of each faculty member is to help each student to fully develop intellectually, spiritually, socially, and physically. This single goal is achieved in a variety of ways. Some teachers coach sports teams, others moderate campus activities, still others work in the classrooms after school, giving extra help to those who need it. The method varies with the man. Just as no two men are alike, neither are two men's techniques alike.

Although the student-to-teacher ratio at Malvern is very low, it is still quite a difficult task for a teacher to spend enough time with even ten students to have a profound effect on them. For a member of the faculty usually has a heavy work load, averaging at least four classes per day. Therefore, he simply does the best he can, and hopes that his efforts have not been in vain. Considering the type of man that has been graduating from Malvern, it seems that the faculty has been rather successful.

HEADMASTER

For the first time in many years, a new man was seen sitting behind the large desk reserved expressly for the Headmaster. This man, Father Thomas Kelly, brought to the office an invaluable combination of youth, vitality, and stamina, as well as many years of experience in the handling of the affairs of high schools. Any doubts about Father's qualifications as Headmaster were quickly replaced by a genuine feeling of optimism. After much consideration and evaluation, Father Kelly began what was to be a major campaign to draw Malvern ever closer to its potential, a campaign which came to include plans to institute next year elective courses, business courses, and detailed brochures explaining the exact nature of these courses.

Overall, Father Kelley's presence as Headmaster, priest, and friend has been appreciated by everyone at Malvern, and because of his work, The Malvern Preparatory School will be much improved in the years to come.

PRIOR

Very few students are aware of the Prior's duties at Malvern Prep. This is because his duties directly concern only the members of the Augustinian community. The Prior can be compared to the mayor of a small, peaceful town. His job is to assist the other priests whenever they need help, and in general, to keep the community running smoothly. The fact that there are no visible signs of discontent among the priests proves that he is doing his job, and doing it well. This is very fortunate for the sutdents, for as the priory goes, so goes the school.

SENIORS

It seems that every Senior class leaves Malvern Prep with mixed emotions. Everyone is relieved that he has completed his academic tenure, but at the same time is somewhat fearful of parting with Malvern's relative security and tranquility. Each senior can feel the excited knot of nervous anticipation in his stomach the day of graduation, but he also knows he is leaving a place to which he can never return in the same capacity—as a member of the Student Body. He wonders if he has wasted the past four years: would he do it the same way if he were given a second chance? Fortunately, nobody need make that decision, for, even in this day of the Asimov-Bradbury infectiousness, time marches forward only, never backward. He can only judge for himself whether it was all worth it, and plan his life accordingly, for all that remains after anything is the future.

UNDER-CLASSMEN

The fortunes of the Underclassmen lie not in the past or present, but rather in the future. Until now, the Underclassmen have experienced almost exactly the same things as the seniors: a good education, a beautiful campus, an excellent teaching staff. In the years ahead, however, lies the difference. The present underclasses will benefit immeasurably from the planned improvements at The Malvern Preparatory School. Changes in the curriculum, on both the academic and athletic fronts, are just a part of it all. Most important is the general feeling of hope that the future will be even more wonderful than the past, that the underclassmen will become the well-rounded graduates they have worked so hard to be.

ALL MEN SEEK THE SOCIETY

OF THOSE WHO THINK

ACTIVITIES

AND ACT SOMEWHAT LIKE THEMSELVES.

After-school activities are an integral part of life at The Malvern Preparatory School. More than half the student body belong to at least one activity, and many students belong to two or more. It is quite easy to see why they are so popular; activities govern almost the entire social aspect of the Malvern community. The Dance Committee organizes the mixers, the acting clubs produce the school plays, the Cynosure staff publishes a monthly newspaper, the Squires plan the school's charity work, the Friar's Lantern presents the literary accomplishments of the students, and the Student Council harmonizes all the other campus activities. Those students who participate therefore have a hand in the regulating of school life, whereas those who do not get involved may only accept the results of these regulations. This alone is one of the best reasons for taking part in Malvern activities.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The Malvern Preparatory School Student Council is annually assigned the monumental task of being all things to all students. If the fulfillment of this task is any indication of success, it would appear that this year's Student Council has attained a degree of success that is rarely dreamed of, let alone encountered. For they have taken the standard student government functions and improved them, all the while creating and implementing new programs designed to enhance the social aspect of life at Malvern. For those who attended, the dances were an enormous success. Likewise with the intramural program, whether the sport be basketball, box-hockey, ping-pong, wrestling, track, or volleyball. But perhaps the Student Council's greatest achievements were those activities initiated this year. The interscholastic exchange program with Cardinal O'Hara, the Hell-Raisers, the Kazoo Band; these are just a few of the many inventions for which future classes at Malvern Prep can thank the 1971-1972 Student Council.

STUDENT COURT

The nature and purpose of the Student Court is to assist in the external functioning of the students as related to conduct. Members of the Court meet with students who have received sanctions for infractions. The purpose of the meetings is to assist the student in removing the sanction so that he remains in good standing in the school.

Under the direction of the Dean of Students the Court has been moderately successful in accomplishing this goal. It is anticipated that in the coming year the Court will be of greater assistance to the school and the Student Body by providing more outlets to allow students to continue in good standing. It will attempt to place more emphasis on the obligation of the student to seek assistance from the Court so that the Court can function to its fullest.

SQUIRES

The Squires' 1971-1972 year under President Mike Owens saw a change that brought more life into the organization than it has had for years. The traditional activities of giving parties for the handicapped and the aged were continued, of course, but now these operations were carried out with the assistance of the girls from Villa Maria. Cooperation, in fact, might be a better word than assistance, since the girls actually outnumbered the Malvernians. It was work, but gratifying—how else but through a Squires' party could you meet a ten year-old who can recite passages from The Iliad and The Odyssey? In addition, the Squires helped enlist support for a march for the relief of Bangladesh, sponsored by St. Joseph's College. To put it simply, the Squires broadened their horizons.

JULIUS CAESAR

This year marked the debut of a new organization at Malvern. Under the guidance of Fr. Carney, The Malvern Preparatory School Shakespearean Society joined the ranks of the many activities offered on campus.

The group's endeavor, a production of "Master Will's" Julius Caesar, was presented on three nights to an audience of parents, students, and friends, and featured a formal premiere. The acting, judging from the response of several professional critics in the audience, was superb. The actors, following the excellent directing of Fr. Richard O'Donnell of Villanova University, portrayed Shakespeare's characters with gusto. Memorable performances were turned in by Mike Schmelzle (Caius Cassius), Lawrence John (Marcus Brutus), and Hugh Liebert (Mark Anthony), not to mention the fine renditions of such supporting actors as Terry Marlowe (Casca), Bill Hobson (Cinna the Poet), Bill Walsh (Ligarius), Rich Yelovich (Marullus), Jack Tomarchio (Flavius), and Joe DiPalantonio (Caesar). The many intricacies of lighting and sound were ably handed by stage manager Phil Goetze and his assistants.

With the sucess of Julius Caesar behind them, the members of the society plan similar classical productions next year. Fr. Carney has expressed a desire to direct them in A Man For All Seasons.

"And now, for my next act, I need a volunteer from the audience."

This year's Photography Club stemmed from last year's AMOPIC (Amateur Motion Picture Club). Last year, under the direction of Mike Owens, the club concerned itself only with super 8 mm movies. With the help of a new charter, drawn up by Ken Pilotti, this year's president, the club was extended to an all-around photography organization. Besides providing the yearbook, newspaper, and other campus publications with the necessary pictures, the club has also produced a promotional film of Malvern Prep, which was presented at the annual Open House.

DEBATING SOCIETY

With the able guidance of the new moderator, Mr. Richard Pepino, and the inspiring leadership of President Michael Schmelzle, The Malvern Preparatory School's Debating Society finished their season with a record of thirty-eight wins and eleven losses. The sophomore team of Tom Mahoney and Tom Petrella posted a perfect record of ten wins and no losses. Two teams, Al Capper and Jim Marlowe, and Michael Schmelzle and Steve Pickering, competed at Penn State University, the second consecutive year that Malvern debators have reached the statewide championship. Returning next year will be G. Beumel, M. Dougherty, J. McCormick, A. Drescher, T. Marlowe, M. Schmelzle, T. Petrella, T. Mahoney, A. Capper, and T. Markle. Although the society will lose seniors J. Hurley, J. Marlowe, and S. Pickering, the presence of so many freshmen and sophomores on this year's team indicates another winning season next year.

The Friar's Lantern is the single most effective gauge of the creativity of the students at The Malvern Preparatory School. The literary magazine is a publication of, by, and for the students. Its very existence depends on the initiative and perseverance of the executive board, a handful of upperclassmen who want to see their efforts pay off in something tangible. For it is they who must urge others to create, a task that sometimes goes contrary to human nature.

In a school of only four hundred students, the appearance of a literary magazine once every two years is regarded as a noteworthy achievement. An annual publication is nothing less than excellent, for it points up the fact that the student body is interested in doing more than just what is required of them.

CYNOSURE

The school newspaper is not a popular institution; indeed, many students have questioned its value. But the success or failure of an activity should not be determined by the reaction of the student body in general. Rather, this judgment should be left only to those students who participate. Ask the people who spent over two thousand hours writing, editing, pasting, and proofreading, whether the Cynosure merited their efforts. Ask them, who for the first time in years, put out at least one issue per month, if they had a second chance, whether they would do it all over again. There is little doubt that the answer would be a unanimous, resounding "Yes!". For this year the Cynosure was more than just a school newspaper. This year it stirred up controversy, reviewed the entertainment field, provided humor for the weary student. This year, Cynosure became an institution.

CAP AND BONNET

On May 19-20, 1972, some 160 people saw the Malvern production of Woody Allen's hilarious comedy, Don't Drink The Water. Under the masterful direction of George D. Sheehan (Malvern '71) and the spiritual guidance of Father Hyland and Ken Pilotti, the audience witnessed one of the best Malvern performances since Arsenic and Old Lace in 1940.

The setting is the U.S. embassy somewhere behind the Iron Curtain. An American tourist and his family rush into the embassy seeking protection from the Secret Police, who accuse them of spying. During their internment, the three "spys" try to work out a plan of escape that would get them home. However, things become more complicated with the help of the Ambassador's son, a natural bungler, and an eccentric priest turned magician. Finally, after much chaos, the tourists manage to escape, and the Ambassador's son marries their daughter.

PROM

Friday, May 5, was the culmination of Malvern's social life for the year. This was the night of the Junior-Senior Prom, which, for the first time in three years, moved from the White Manor Country Club to the more luxurious Holiday Inn in King of Prussia. The Prom was held in the downstairs ballroom, a large and beautifully decorated room which suited the gaiety of the event perfectly. The service and the dinner proved to be an agreeable surprise. The cooking staff prepared a superb feast of roast beef, baked potatoes, and string beans, as well as a sumptuous strawberry parfait dessert, which was served in a rapid and professional, though friendly, manner.

Aside from the wide variety of startling tuxedo fashions, the most notable characteristic of this year's Prom was the lack of any difficulty. Nothing marred the smooth continuity of the evening. The Prom group, Breed, efficiently blasted the Prom-goers onto the dance floor, which was jam-packed until the closing minutes of the Prom. The chaperones provided the necessary authority in an appreciated unobtrusive manner. Even Matt McClernon's after-Prom party (for many seniors the high point of the evening) came off without a hitch. Indeed, it will be a long time before anybody forgets the 1972 Junior-Senior Prom.

DANCE COMMITTEE

This year's Dance Committee is a proud bunch, and with good reason. Although essentially a rookie team, for there were really no dances at Malvern last year, they did their job with an efficiency that indicated a much more experienced, professional membership. Their first dance was a smashing success, with not one major faux pas evident during the entire evening. The handling of subsequent mixers was equally competent, for, despite the small number of students attending, there were no complaints to be heard. The committee's enthusiasm hasn't flagged, and if they can come up with a solid promotion line, next year's dances have a good chance of drawing capacity crowds.

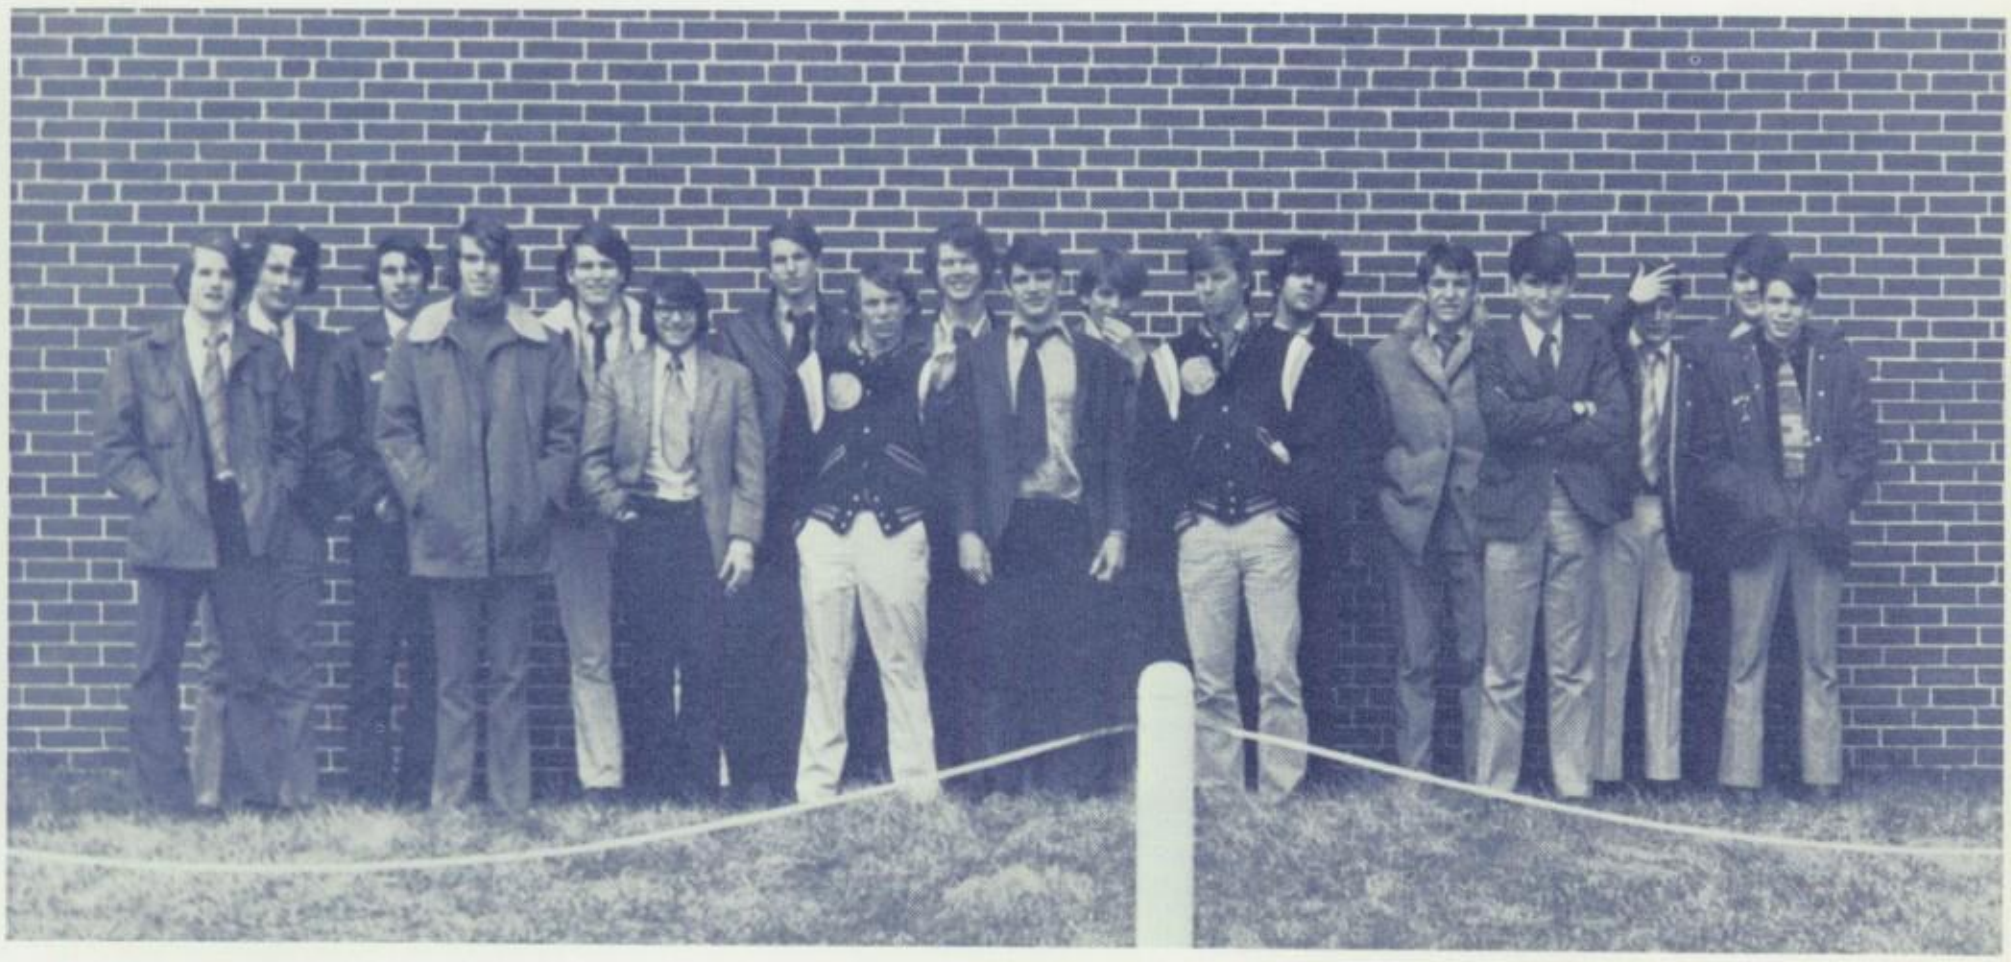
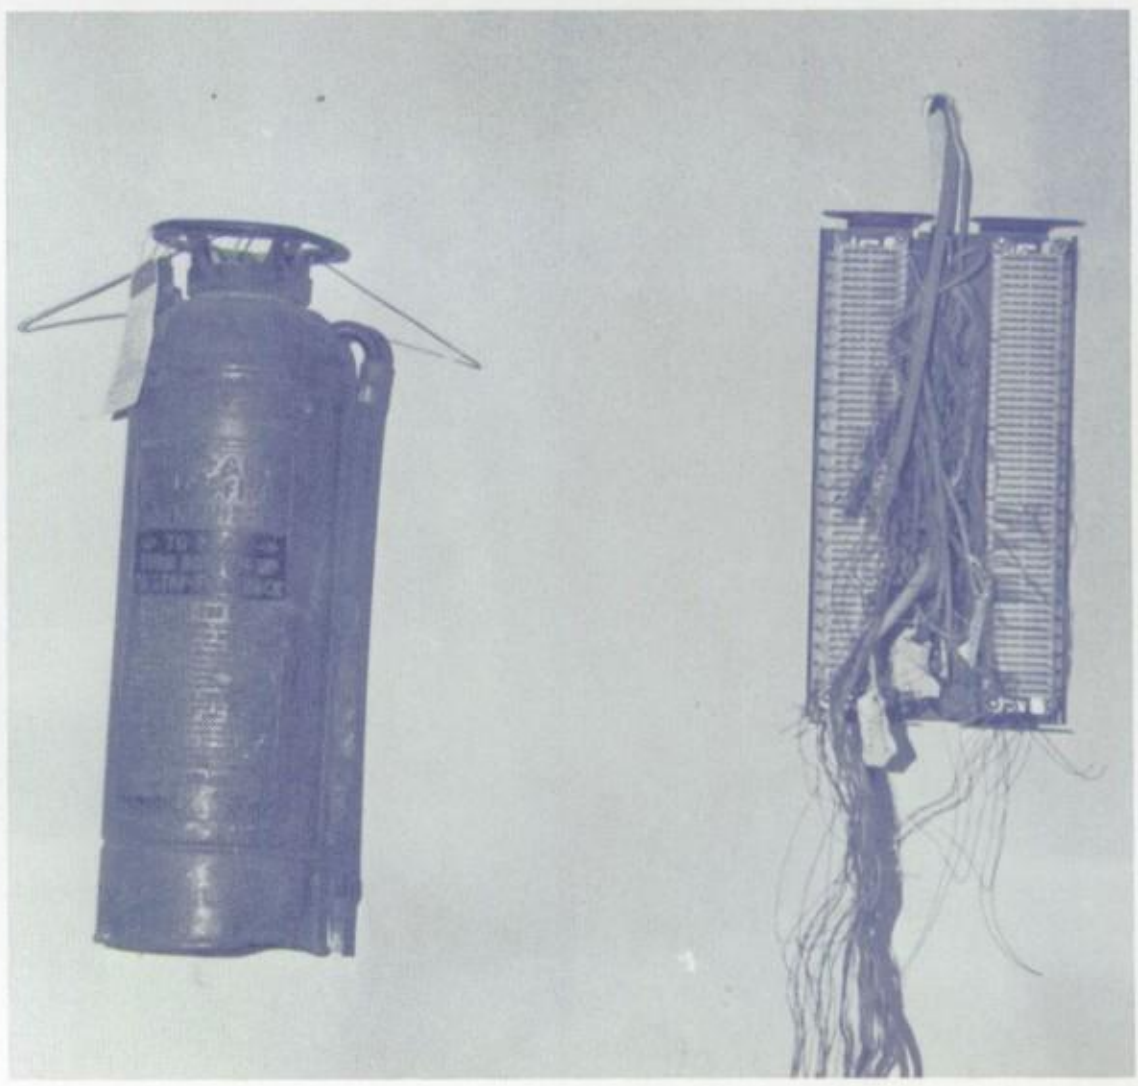
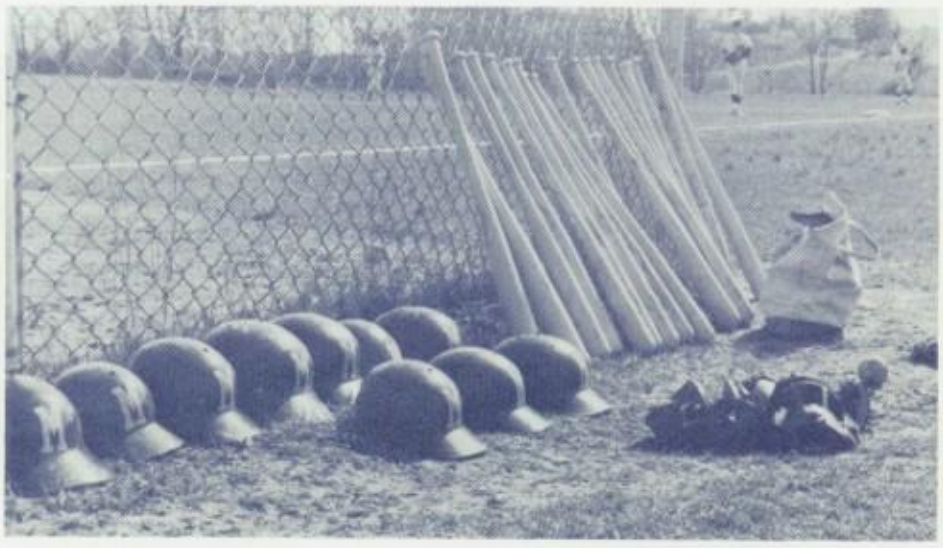
Top left: While not all the dances were as crowded as this one, most did produce a small profit.

The Executive Board of the Dance Committee—Sitting: Chairman Mike Collins, Dan Leonard, Joe Donnelly, Steve Klug. Standing: Jim Foster, Moderator Mr. Russell Simeone, Skip Minisi, Bob Quigley, Kevin Leary, Tom Simpson.

The Entire Dance Committee, bless its pointed little head.







AS FLIES TO WANTON BOYS,

ARE WE TO THE GODS

THEY KILL US FOR THEIR SPORT.

SPORTS

There is very little doubt at The Malvern Preparatory School that the sports program is a success. With almost half the student body participating on the varsity level, Malvern teams finished at or near the top in almost every sport, a notable feat in a league as competitive as the Interac. Still, as the various coaches feel, there is room for improvement, and if that improvement comes in the near future, there is no reason why Malvern should not take first or second place in the Interac in every varsity sport.

The intramural program was almost as succesful. Those sports were very well-planned, and enthusiastically attended, with some sections sponsoring two or three teams in a single sport. There are indeed few schools that can claim a good sports program on two separate levels, and happily, Malvern Prep is one of them.

FOOTBALL

It seems that football grows more popular at The Malvern Preparatory School every year. The team, despite rigorous practice sessions directed by head coach Jack McGuinn and his staff, has an amazing amount of depth, easily capable of fielding several offensive or defensive units. The caliber of player has improved over the years, culminating in the person of a Wally Shields, or a Brian Kolmer.

This year, the Friars' overall record was 5-3, which is quite good, considering the strong opponents they had to face. Special mention must be made of their win over Salesianum, a team that is rated one of the best in the state of Delaware.

Both teams are determined that Wally Shields should give somebody else a chance to run with the ball.

This year's cross-country team took second place in the Interac, its best showing since the championship year of 1968. After shutting out Penn Charter, new head coach Dick Buerkle's runners lost to a strong Episcopal team. The Friars then went on to defeat five of the next six teams they faced. The most outstanding team effort of the season came against Haverford, with John Clarke tying the Malvern course record of 12:42, and Dan Leonard, Steve MacDonald, and Steve Klug taking third, fifth, and sixth places, respectively. Another fine performance came against Chestnut Hill, as the Friars swept sixteen of the first seventeen places.

In the invitational meets, Malvern was equally well represented. At the Fordham Invitational, in New York City, Clarke placed seventeenth, and the team took twenty-fifth. In the Catholic War Vets meet, Clarke captured fifth place, and Leonard took twenty-fifth.

Despite an excellent season, the Friars feel there is still room for improvement. And with most of the team returning next year, Coach Buerkle believes that Malvern will definitely be in the running for the Interac crown.

For years the major complaint at Malvern was that the basketball team, though packed with talent, continually, finished with a record barely above .500. That's all changed now. This year, new head coach Dan Kelly took a group with enormous potential, taught them some essentials and finer skills of the game, and molded them into a single unit. After that, it was up to the players, who had to face some of the finest talent in the area during the course of the season. They had to supply their own determination, their own desire to win. And win they did. Their final record was 20-5, with three of those losses coming against Penn Charter, rated the best team in the city of Philadelphia at the end of the season. Four of the starting five will be' returning next year, and if Coach Kelly can reorganize the players as well as he did last year, there is no doubt that Malvern will improve upon its admirable record and win the Interac crown.

ICE HOCKEY

The ice hockey team at Malvern Prep is a living example of what a group of students can do if they are serious and patient enough. A few years ago, no hockey team existed at Malvern, much to the chagrin of several members of the school community. They banded together, and despite 4:00 A.M. practice sessions, and 11:00 P.M. games, formed a reasonably good team. The first season was a string of discouraging defeats, but with a year of experience under their belts, the team bounced back in 1971 and worked their way to a .500 season record. This year, playing under improved conditions in the University of Pennsylvania Rink, Malvern posted its first winning log, 7-5-1. They even made it to the first round of the league playoffs, a feat virtually unheard of for a third-year team.

RIFLE

Rifle is not a spectator sport. There would be no reason for someone to watch a rifle meet, because, without field glasses, it is nearly impossible to see how the shooter has fared. Thus, the rifle team at Malvern Prep suffers perennially from a lack of publicity. Fortunately, this does not bother the members of the team. Nor does the fact that they had an 0-5 record this year, for they know that their opponents are usually the best in the Philadelphia area, and that the only remedy for a bad season is practice. Since the entire team will be returning next year, it is reasonable to assume that the rifle record will be better, for one more year of experience and improvement certainly cannot hurt.

This year showed a drastic change in the wrestling situation at Malvern Prep. Happily, those changes were for the better in every case. For the first time in years, the wrestlers posted a decisively winning season record, 6-3; they defeated two Interac teams, Episcopal and Chestnut Hill; Mike Collins became the first Malvern wrestler ever to win all of his matches, for a record of 9-0. All this comes only two years after the school had planned to drop varsity wrestling. All this was possible only through the efforts of less than one dozen dedicated students. A major recruiting campaign was launched in order to fill the starting ranks, for a lack of depth in past years had cost the Friars many a meet.

Coaches Gordon Davies and Ted Alex were determined to make the Malvern wrestlers the best-conditioned team in the Interac, because they knew that when two teams of equal talent wrestle, the team in the best physical shape will win. The practice sessions were tough, almost brutal. However, nobody on the wrestling team complained. The results speak for themselves.

Indoor track is a sport set up for the convenience of another sport. That is, one of the major purposes of indoor track is to keep the runners in shape for the spring track season. In the process, some very interesting things have happened. For example, indoor track is becoming a very popular spectator sport all across America. Held in large stadiums, track meets frequently draw capacity crowds. Sadly, this is not the case at Malvern, where indoor meets rarely draw more than twenty Malvern students, because of the time (8:00 A.M. on Saturdays) and the location (University of Delaware or West Chester State College). This does not bother the track team, who realize that their sport is of secondary importance to spectators. It particularly did not bother John Clarke, who several times broke the Malvern record for the indoor two mile run in the span of a month. With notable feats like this in the face of spectator apathy, it is no wonder that the spring track team is so strong with the addition of spectator support.

SWIMMING

Coach Paul Hornsleth knew 1972 was going to be a good year for the Malvern Prep swimming team. Eighty per cent of his 1971 National Catholic Championship team had returned, and his new recruits stacked up as some of the most talented ever to swim for Malvern. He expected great things.

When the swimming season began, Coach Hornsleth's expectations seemed to be well-founded indeed. His swimmers were all working to the limit in every meet. They beat every team they faced by more than ten points, teams that included the more experienced LaSalle College freshman team, and the Navy Plebes. After the smoke had cleared, the regular season was completed, and Malvern's record stood at 9-0.

By now, the whole team had caught the confidence that Mr. Hornsleth exuded. They felt that nothing could stop them from taking first place in the National Catholic Championships for the second consecutive year. And nothing did. While rolling to the title, the Friars amassed an enormous total of 220.5 points, and had eight of their membership elevated to All-America status.

In the tough Eastern Regionals, Malvern, though weary from their arduous schedule, took third place behind Pinecrest and Lawrenceville. With this final feather in their caps, the team completed the 1972 swimming season at least as successfully as Coach Hornsleth had predicted.

TENNIS

If Coach Herman Lotstein ever resigns his position on the Tennis Team, it would be only fair that Malvern retire his favorite court, or bronze his tennis shoes, for Mr. Lotstein has been fighting uphill in tennis' behalf ever since he took over as coach. His major opponents have not been the talented and more experienced teams of the Interac League, but rather lack of interest, on the part of both prospective players and spectators, poor court conditions, and conflicts in schedules. With problems such as these, building a strong tennis program has not been an easy task. Coach Lotstein feels that his current crop of players is the best he's ever had at Malvern. His answer to the bad season the Tennis Team had is more practice than ever. Only time will tell whether he is right.

LACROSSE

If one were to ask the coaches of the top lacrosse teams in the area which team they thought was the one to watch in the future, their answers would probably be the same: "Malvern Prep." For in only three years, Head Coach Jack McGuinn, this year with the assistance of Mr. Dan Kelly, had bonded his once-fledgling recruits into a solid force to be reckoned with. Against the more experienced teams of much larger schools, teams that rank among the best on the East Coast, Malvern compiled a highly respectable 6-6 record. With such fine results in only three years, starting with completely inexperienced players, one can only speculate on how far the Friars will go in the next three years.

BASEBALL

This was the second year for the revival of the baseball program under Head Coach Frank Ryan and his assistant Joe Cellini, and, judging by the record and increased spectator turnout, it must be considered a huge success.

The first half of the season, during which the Friars played several of the larger Catholic League schools, proved to be the best that a Malvern baseball team has experienced in over five years. Everything seemed to click, with the hitters stranding virtually none of their teammates on base, while the pitchers did just the opposite to their opponents. The result was a much improved team winning most games by a margin of three runs or more. Even in the second half of the season, after the loss of some senior sluggers, the Friars battled hard, winning some important ones, and losing the traditional heartbreakers, the one-run decisions.

It is noteworthy that the stands were almost always filled to capacity at home games, and proves that a large crowd of fans can mean the difference of three runs in a well-played game. With much of this year's team returning next year, there is every reason to expect that Malvern will capture the Interac title with a perfect record.

GOLF

Golf is a very strange game, a game that can in no way be judged by the common standards of sport. This is because golf is a game that nobody can dominate to a great extent. Even on the pro tour, it is rare indeed that one player wins more than ten of the fifty tournaments each year. In such a shaky situation, it is easy to see how a group of five golfers can have several collective bad days. A few bad shots by each member of the team, and the match is virtually over. Seen in this light, Malvern's 2-6 record is not really that bad. And with all of this year's team returning, it is Coach Francis Kenny's belief that next year's record will be a great improvement upon this year's, possibly even a complete reversal.

The famous Clarke-Liebert team: if Jeff doesn't outrun them, Hugh spears them.

TRACK

Among the spring sports offered at Malvern, the one that seemed to draw more candidates each year was track. However, this year, for some reason, the track team suffered from a disease that has, at one time or another, afflicted almost every function on campus—apathy. Malvern was forced to take an exceedingly low place in many of the field events at most of the meets.

Perhaps a major reason for the team's relative success was the addition of ex-Villanova star Dick Buerkle to head coach Dave van-Dusen's staff. Now in serious training for the Olympics, Mr. Buerkle employed some of his own methods of practice in coaching Malvern's distance runners, resulting in fine performances in all the meets, and the qualifying of six men in the Interac Championships. In the finals, these six went on to take third place, an amazing feat considering that most of the opposing teams had almost double that number in the running.

With Malvern's distance and relay events on sure footing, it remains only for Coach van-Dusen to find some good field men to pave the way to the Interac League title next year.

Mike Collins could always be counted on winning his heat in the 220-yard low hurdles.

GRADUATION

Malvern's forty-sixth Commencement was unique; it had more than its share of first time activities: a concelebrated Baccalaureate Mass followed by a breakfast with parents, seniors and faculty seated with the audience instead of on the stage, and Father Cassell's suggestion that the seniors applaud their parents. But it also had its traditional elements: the walk up to the auditorium, ubiquitous cameras, forgotten tassels, and Mr. Sullivan's final dismissal with the tossing of caps (some of which, for reasons hirsute, were larger this year).

Between the unusual and the traditional there were the acts germane to all graduations: the announcement by Father Kelly that the class of '72 had been awarded nearly a quarter of a million dollars in scholarships, the address to the graduates by the Most Rev. Gerald V. McDevitt, D.D., and the awarding of diplomas by the Very Rev. Harry Cassell, O.S.A., Augustinian Provincial.

Steve Pickering welcomed the assembled guests with his salutatory, while Jim Burke delivered a positive, optimistic valedictory filled with the Faulkneresque idea that man will not only endure but also prevail.

Then it was over.

However, one important tradition waited outside, with open arms. That is one tradition it would be difficult upon which to improve.

Rev. Henry F. Scanlan
15 February 1908 - 9 July 1972

The death of Father Henry F. Scanlan, July 9, 1972 was a severe loss to Malvern Prep. Born February 15, 1908 in Shenandoah, he was ordained June 15, 1937. During the long painful sickness, to a far greater degree he manifested the characteristics that made him so beloved by all who knew him. A true description of Father Scanlan could be summed up in one word, kindness.

A man of sincere dedication, he searched until he found his true vocation—the priesthood. With great zeal he worked wherever he was called: Ojai, California, Cuba, Bronx, New York, Iceland as military chaplain, Bonner High and Malvern Prep.

Yes, Father Scanlan was truly an "alter Christus"—another Christ.

In Memoriam

Eileen Pohl
8 September 1932 - 24 April 1972

Eileen Pohl was a cultured French teacher to some of our students, but an endearing friend to all of us at Malvern. This vivacious and sentimental lady was widely loved for her tender, almost motherly, concern for those who knew her. Though her life terminated early, the legacy of kindness and goodness imparted by Eileen will be with us for the years to come.

Domenic DeFilippo
18 January 1903-18 June 1972

The sweat and grime of the training room, the shouts of victory or the salt tear of bitter defeat were all too familiar to Nick DeFillippo, our trainer, whose fatherly concern and healing hands affected literally hundreds of Malvernians. Known for his mercuric temperament and hearty laugh, this irreplaceable man will be remembered for his devotion to youth and the principles of fair play.

James Duggan
23 September 1894 - 5 April 1972

Like a leprechaun Jimmy Duggan would appear out of the most unusual places on campus. A long time friend to a whole generation of students, Jimmy will be remembered for his nostalgic stories told with inescapable Irish wit. As a custodian Jimmy was sometimes known to be irascible and even a task master to some students. In his silent world of simple day to day chores methodically performed, his spirit reminded us that there is joy in simplicity.

James McDonald
19 December 1952 - 16 January 1972

Anyone who has seen the 1971 Malvernian knows it is the singular achievement of its editor, Jim McDonald. As the epilogue said, "future classes . . . will have this as an archetype of inventiveness." Jim devoted the summer of '71 to creativity, long hours, and a second book, the Friar's Lantern. The creation and production of the two are inseparable, for Jim McDonald brought a unique quality to each. Of the Friar's Lantern he said in his "Prologue": "Herein lie feeling, sincerity, hard work, and ability. It is a good book. It is a cornerstone on which to build. Let greatness, and extravagance come with time. There must always be a start."

There are many more now than the few who realized then Jim's exuberance and willingness to organize the formless to the formed. He literally made the comprehensive final corrections which imbue each with an originality which will continue as a tribute to his rare contribution to Malvern's history.

Perhaps only shocking poetical analysis makes Jim's final stanza of "The Chain Completed" so prophetic:

O Precious Child! O Sweetest Joys!
Possess my soul, and take my heart.
I fear you not, I need your touch
Till Death removes me from your reach.

Epilogue

Seven years ago, the former adviser of this book began what has become an annual struggle for pithy, yet significant commentary on the book, the class, or the year. Often it has been easy to reconstruct the agonies of creation, evaluate the apathy (or enthusiasm) of a group, or assay the year's events with succinct, if barbed, verbiage.

Frequently, there is a tone of weariness to these last words (and indeed they are the last written) for the mind is drained from writing copy and evaluating photographs; the mind is also relieved to the state of ennui that once again this incredibly complex project has been completed. (The complexity cannot be overstated.) However, 1972 represents a change, a silent, yet omnipresent metamorphosis, which will affect the Malvern community far into the future. The social atmosphere and the academic foundation have been unalterably redirected, with the cooperation of the faculty and student body.

If one adviser could write in 1966, "It is a beginning," then one must write now that this book represents the culmination of something unprecedented in Malvern's history although the yearbook remains a constant based upon diverse aesthetic philosophies which somehow manage to complement one another over a span of twelve months, too many miles, broken typewriters, and misspent midnight oils.

There is, unfortunately, one other constant. While there is a certain cerebral pleasure in the pain of seeking the proper phrasing there remains the question of how many have read the words (however few) or understood the meaning (however ambiguous).

That is a constant which may never be answered and a tradition which will, we trust, continue.

We would not want it any other way.
